The American Cancer Society joins forces with more than 3 million volunteers around the country to reduce the risk of cancer in every community. We are doing that by helping people stay well and get well, by finding cures, and by fighting back against a disease that has taken too much.

The Circle Of Life Initiative was developed for American Indian and Alaska Native communities to provide cancer education activities using a holistic and culturally tailored approach for individuals, families, and tribes to make healthy choices and stay well. The Circle Of Life Initiative builds on a strong foundation of cancer resources produced by American Indians and Alaska Natives, as well as American Cancer Society resources, to support, educate, and guide community members through every step of the cancer journey. The Circle Of Life Initiative encourages communities to learn more about how to reduce their risk of getting cancer, understand ways to find cancer early when it is most treatable, learn about the different types of cancer treatments, and understand the role of a caregiver during a loved one's cancer journey.
